BiH SCMM adopts platform for the Presidency members' talks with NATO representatives in Brussels

According to Oslobodjenje, at its session in Sarajevo on Monday, the BiH Standing Committee for Military Matters (SCMM) fully agreed on a platform for upcoming BiH presidency members' talks with the NATO officials in Brussels. At the invitation of NATO, the Presidency members are expected on Wednesday to meet with NATO Secretary-General George Robertson and attend session of the North Atlantic Council (NAC). The adopted platform concerns the pre-conditions BiH has to fulfill before the accession to the Partnership for Peace Program. Nezavisne Novine also reports on a BiH delegation visit to NATO HQ in Brussels. The BiH Delegation is comprised of the members of the Presidency, military advisors to the members of the Presidency, the entities' Defense Ministers and Commanders of the RS and Federation Army. The platform for the talks with NATO, which was adopted by the BiH Presidency and the SCMM, according to the newspaper, offers solutions to problems of BiH foreign and interior policy and underlines the importance of the implementation of the Dayton Agreement. The military part of the platform points out the role of the Presidency, the SCMM and its Secretariat in the control over the armed forces, coordination of all armed forces in BiH, as well as the need to downsize and restructure the armed forces. The BiH delegation will be headed by the Chairman of the BiH Presidency, Beriz Belkic.

The trade union leaders announced at a press conference following the meeting that they would form a common body at the state level to coordinate work of the two trade union associations and establish their cooperation with the state in international bodies. AFP: BiH lodges protest after arrest of two citizens in Macedonia

The BiH Foreign Ministry said Monday it had asked Macedonia for an explanation after two BiH citizens were allegedly beaten in police custody in Skopje last month. Omer Avdusinovic and Asim Sefer were arrested in Macedonia while en route to Jordan where they study. The two were detained for three days during which time Sefer was "physically abused", the ministry said. "Asim Sefer stated that he had been physically abused to such a degree that at one point he fainted...Sefer was hit to his back, head and right leg," the statement said. After being released on February 16, the two Bosnians continued their trip to Jordan. On the arrival, they contacted the BiH Embassy there to give statements on the events in Macedonia. An unnamed senior Macedonian official said last week that the two BiH citizens and two Jordanians, who had also been arrested in Skopje, were recorded having a conversation about plans to "destroy the devil and the axis." The official said the phrase was a reference to the United States, Britain and Germany, but did not disclose the names of the arrested suspects. The BiH Foreign Ministry said it was surprised by the "treatment Bosnian citizens received" in Macedonia, adding that the incident could harm relations between the two countries. "We believe that this does not contribute to the development of good relations between BiH and Macedonia," the ministry's statement said. It added that an official explanation had been requested from Skopje.

Slobodna Dalmacija: Interview with Beriz Belkic, the BiH Presidency Chairman

(Provided by OHR Mostar)

How likely is it that the High Representative will by his Decision amend the current Republika Srpska Constitution?

Should Petritsch be forced to impose the constitutional changes for numerous reasons that have now come to the surface, it would be good if that solution is not a half-way or a compromise solution which has often been the case so far. Namely, amendments to the Election law, the issue of accession to the Council of Europe and, finally, why not say it, holding of elections are linked to the consistent implementation of the Decision of the Constitutional Court on Constituency of all the three peoples on the entire territory of BiH. Therefore, should the High Representative be forced to impose a solution, I hope that the solution will be in conformity with the European standards.

Local media, but the ones in Croatia also, have lately been often emphasising that the relations between BiH and Croatia have deteriorated. They are assessed to be more complex and burdened than they were at the time of the former authorities?

When one would like to engage in malevolent way of thinking, and there are those who only see the dark side, one could make such a conclusion. Namely, the combination of various recent events and circumstances can lead one to thinking about whether the current official policy of the Republic of Croatia has changed its positions and the clearly defined principles according to which they would like to cooperate with BiH, which was welcomed and accepted here.

personally, I am not prone to believe that there has been a shift in the general policy of the Republic of Croatia towards our country and it is my assessment that all that has been happening lately is a combination of misfortunate circumstances and a reflection of internal turmoil that are on in the Republic of Croatia. I am also of the opinion that these, conditionally put, incident cases must be a warning to the authorities in Croatia that things can also be interpreted in a way that is of no benefit to anyone.

The Presidency has, therefore, while considering the conclusions of the last meeting of the Inter-State Council for Cooperation, recommended to our Foreign Minister to urgently engage in organising a meeting on the level of the BiH Chairman of the Council of Ministers and the Croatian Government's president.

What is your comment on verbal advocating of the current authorities of the idea that it is domestic political forces that need to take the responsibility in the country and, at the same time, they wait for the High Representative to make decisions?

We are hypocritical. Not only are we hypocritical but we also lack courage. We curry favour to the International Community and tell them what they want to hear. The International Community sent a signal a long time ago that they expected the local authorities to take full responsibility – like, you know, this is your country, you are responsible for it. The we, politicians, say we are ready for that, and while facing the first problem, we run away having no courage to face it. We actually want the decisions to be imposed by the High representative so that we can have an alibi before the domestic public.

Although I have a positive position on the House of Peoples, I do not think it to be the only way of the national protection. I believe that the fundamental issue here is the one of the political culture, i.e. the understanding of the terms such as human, national rights, religious, cultural rights etc. We can legalize all the possible solutions but, unless we develop political culture, the spirit of certain principles and the awareness of our own country, all this will be in vain. We can prescribe that everyone has the same rights all this can fail just because of one local civil servant and his understanding of "equality".

Editorials

Oslobodjenje and Dnevni Avaz

In the Oslobodjenje In Focus column, Mirko Sagolj wrote that the leaders of the eight political parties in BiH had not at their last week's meeting in the OHR building in Sarajevo removed obstacles to the implementation of the BiH Constitutional Court's ruling on the constituency of the peoples. "The talks will be resumed in a day, and this time, the High Representative is expressing a bit more optimism about the final outcome," Sagolj wrote. He said that the positions among parties were the most different when it came to the issue of the peoples' representation in the authorities. However, according to Sagolj, another fact is disastrous for the democratic destiny of BiH, and it is about a poor mentioning if at all of "the others," meaning Jews, Romany and members of other ethnic minorities, or the ethnically indifferent citizens in the current phase of the constitutional reforms. "Examine from the ethnic equality is not being passed on the major peoples, but on the ethnic minorities," Sagolj concluded. Sead Numanovic wrote in the Dnevni Avaz Commentary of the Day that the election of Dragan Kalinic as the SDS President and Dragan Cavic as his Deputy represented support to the continuity of the SDS post-Dayton policy.

Dnevni List: On Tuesdays from the right - Kalimero

Written by Marko Tokic (Provided by OHR Mostar)

DL carries an editorial by Marko Tokic in which he says, in relation to the constitutional changes, that the Serbs want Facelift, i.e. how to please the form and disregard the essence, that the Muslims want Symmetry, i.e. to introduce protection mechanisms thus abolishing entities and if that's not possible to turn the Federation into a Republic and that the Croats want the Mission Impossible, introduction of protection mechanisms in both entities the way they operate at BiH level. Tokic says that the Serbs will get what they want and that the Bosniaks' political goals are harmonized to their partner's ones and that the IC has least troubles when dealing with the Croats. Tokic says that in the end the entities will not be abolished and that would leave Petritsch happy when he leaves the country because "he did not do injustice. Even if he did, it was the Croats who are at fault. Jelavic, HDZ, Cardinal Puljic...It is only He, Wolfgang the Great who is honest and honourable. He would have done everything for them had they known to bow to the Majesty. He would have helped. That's why Wolfgang hopes that the parliaments will take justice into their hands in which one people has an absolute domination and in the other, the domination has been realized though political violence", says Tokic. Finally, Tokic is being ironic saying that he (Tokic) will not hear Kalimero (a cartoon character) saying "this is injustice" but Petritsch who will say that he is pleased to leave without having to take such an important decision such as a decision on the constitutional changes and that Paddy Ashdown is arriving to provide more help to politicians.

Nezavisne Novine: RTRS serves citizens or government?

Written by Gavrilo Antonic (Provided by OHR Banja Luka)

After the RS Government openly expressed its desire to control judicial system, universities and other areas of public life, it became their side activity to discipline the media, too. In such a way the politics influences a 'final product' of RTRS, which is the most important tool for a three-member coalition.

It took more than a year for the RS Government to present to the members of the Peoples Assembly of the Republic of Srpska a draft version of the law on RTRS, although the Prime Minister in his inaugural talks promised to have this law passed as soon as possible. For more than a year has been going on the agony of the employees of this media outlet, as their status, the financial problems (salaries haven't been paid for months), technical capacity and other problems still haven't been resolved.

Together with enormous delays regarding adoption of the Law on RTRS, the government from the very beginning chose an option to cut the funds from the budget dedicated to public informing. The amount of 5 millions in the year 2000 was cut to 3 millions for the last year and then to 2 millions allocated to this year. Tightening of the belt (some say of the hang rope) is contrary to the publicly proclaimed care for survival of "one symbol of Republika Srpska", as it may be often heard from the ruling coalition.

The public knew about the misunderstandings with OHR for more than a year which was served to the public as a reason for delay. When the Government finally, in the year of Parliamentary elections, "heroically" went out with its version of Draft law on RTRS, notwithstanding the disagreements with the OHR, it became obvious that the major difference was about the definition of the "public service". In other words, how should it look like and who should elect the steering board of that public service? Both proposals agree only on one matter: that the future steering board should have nine members. The differences showed up when it came to appointments. OHR considers that it is sufficient that the Assembly appoints four members, and that the rest are appointed by journalist associations, Union, University, private undertakers and Bar Association.

Still, Government believes that all the members should be exclusively be appointed by the Assembly, which in practice means that the ruling Assembly majority while the aforementioned associations and communities may appear only as proposers. It does not take too much brains to conclude that from this instance begins the line of political or party influence on the "final product" of this important media house, that is being seriously counted on by the ruling three-member coalition. It is also not a secret that there is dissatisfaction in the ruling majority and with it also the pressures for change in editorial policy of RTRS.

If this law is adopted, in the form the Government proposed, it is more than clear that it would bring an end to the accomplished level of editorial autonomy of this media house, which was more a result of the efforts of its employees than a result of this or that government will. From this instance to the party journalism and perception of journalists as a socio-political worker is a short path that will be crossed by the ruling majority (SDS, PDP and SPRS) easily before the public, "covered" by the vigorous opposing by OHR and so-called protection of national interests, which are not actually threatened by anyone.

If the RTRS workers even have the freedom to choose, the range of possibilities is sure not wide, but the decision is hard: sacrificing of the accomplished level of professionalism and independence for more secure material state. According to the headlines from the Government, money will be available, but only after the law is adopted and after the beginning of its implementation. Financial worn out RTRS workers will solve this dilemma the way they have to?

And what about the democratic reforms? After the unhidden ambitions of the authorities in RS to establish the political reform over the judiciary, University and other fields of public life, whose realization already started, disciplining of media comes as a side activity. Good old socialism is banging on our door harder and harder. Does anyone know when the "stafeta" will happen this year?
