RTRS report on absence of election posters in RS towns despite campaign launch on September 27 (03:59)

In spite of the fact that the RS election campaign has been on for almost a month and that the political parties have been presenting their platforms daily, a surprisingly tiny number of election posters grace the entity's roadsides and walls. However, the parties have announced they will step up their activities beginning next week, emphasising that election material is continuously being printed. OSCE and municipal government regulations regarding election material are extremely strict this year and posters are forbidden on all public facilities, trees and traffic signs. RTRS surveyed some RS parties on how much money they intend to spend for the printing of election material. According to SNSD Election HQ Head Slavko Mitrovic, his party will not spend more than 60,000 KM. Igor Radojicic of the DSP emphasised that their election material will be printed in limited quantity and that expenses will come to a maximum of 100,000 KM. Slavko Popovic said he could guarantee that the SDS would spend less than half the amount allowed by international community rules. The RS Government re-balanced its 2000 budget earmarking 400,000 KM for political parties.
