Zoran Trkija, shot two days ago in Travnik was supposed to be buried today, originally in Croatian part of the town. However, after Municipality Governor Dzambas approved it, he received anonymous telephone threats that Zoran's body will be dug out if buried there. After that, his family and wife decided to bury him in the Bosniak controlled part of the town at the City Cemetery. However, according to his friends, Islamic Community of Travnik opposed this idea. Then the order followed to the employees of communal enterprise to clear bushes aside of the cemetery in order to dig the grave for him. Such attitude shocked citizens of Travnik and especially people who fought with Zoran for four years in the BiH Army. Islamic Community allegedly said that the cemetery is property of the Islamic Community and that other nationalities cannot be buried there, so his friends decided to dig the grave for him in the city cemetery and bury him there. With this gesture, citizens of Travnik, divided since 1992, broke all the walls and in best way showed how to defend humanity, friendship, co-existence and BiH. The lecture that the Travnik citizens held for the Municipality authorities should be worth for everybody.
