Sarajevo - Session of the Council of Ministers - Although the session lasted for five hours, the most important items of the agenda were not discussed. Adoption of the budget and Budget Execution Law was postponed for the extraordinary session on Tuesday because the members of the Council of Ministers received the working materials late. The Law on the Council of Ministers was also postponed for some other session, and most of the time was spent on adoption of conclusions from the last session. Co-chair Bosic said that they did not think that there would be so much work for them to do, and they would have to consult the Presidency to see what are the closely defined competencies of each of the two institutions. He said that the adoption of the decision on usage of public documents would also require further consultations at a higher level because it is a huge political issue.

Sarajevo - The Protocol from March 27 had foreseen the inauguration session of the Sarajevo City Assembly for today, as well as election of the mayor and his two deputies, and adoption of the City Statute. As Principal Deputy to High Representative, Michael Steiner said, all the documents were ready, including the necessary amendments to the Federation and Canton Constitution, but the session was not held because the text of the amendment with regard to Mostar was not agreed. This linkage of Sarajevo to Mostar arises from the Protocol which says that the necessary Constitutional amendments for both cities need to be adopted in parallel in both Houses of the Parliament.

Ambassador Steiner also attended the session, and said that he hoped that the establishment of the City Assembly would follow soon, since all the documents, except the Mostar one, are ready.

However, this is not the final date, because one cannot say with certainty whether the necessary state-level laws will be adopted by that time. Murphy said that holding of a mini conference which would provide mini resources is possible in the meantime. Ivanko announced that the only Bosniak family that returned to Banja Luka was forced to flee their home again yesterday because of 150 Serbs who stoned their house, enraged by the visit of Bosniak refugees from abroad. The crowd was also hostile towards the RS Police that did everything to protect the family from the assault.
