War crimes
ICTY sentences Ivica Rajic to 12 years by ICTY for crimes against Bosniaks in village Stupni Do	Hayat by Asim Beslija, The Hague - The ICTY has sentenced former commander of the Croat Defence Council [HVO] Ivica Rajic to twelve years in prison, for crimes committed in the village of Stupni Do in September 1993, when 25 Bosniak civilians and six soldiers have been killed, while the village was completely destroyed. ICTY has also found Rajic guilty of apprehension and torturing of more than 250 Bosniak men in Vares, two days before HVO launched an attack on Stupni Do. In October 2005 Rajic pleaded guilty on four counts of the indictment, and made an off-the-court settlement with Prosecutor's Office, which ICTY considered as an extenuating circumstance while pronouncing a sentence. Therefore, although this is only a first-degree verdict, it is expected that Rajic would not file a complaint and according to the settlement Rajic is obligated to testify in other related cases. RHB, BHT1, FTV, RTRS, Dnevni List , front pg splash and pg 3 'Repentant Rajic gets 12 years', by V. A source close to the Tribunal says this is more likely a farce created with an aim to hide the true location where Mladic is hiding. The SDA and SBiH RSNA MPs expressed their dissatisfaction with the halt in the police reform, and announced their withdrawal of support. RSNA deputy Sadik Ahmetovic [SDA] confirmed that he would raise the issue of support to Dodik's government at the next week's session of the SDA Presidency. "RS Government, both this and previous one, obstructed issue [of police reform], and when we did not support the old government for that reason, it is logical that we raise this issue again." SBiH deputy Dzevad Osmancevic shares this stance, adding that he is going to speak with Dodik: "If we estimate that Dodik is blocking European way of our state, we would withhold our support in the RSNA. Though, I do not expect removal of the Government, due to our withdrawal from majority, for I assume that homogenisation of Serb parties will take place again." Dodik confirmed for daily that he is not ready to change his stances: "I do not intend to make any compromise on preserving police, even if it would mean for Government to lose the support. Noting that supporters of the amendments have done 'a lot of good things'; McElhaney believes that those parties will be able to take this process to a next level, because "there will be no second phase of constitutional changes until the first one is completed". U.S. Ambassador deems that it's the time to start a discussion in BiH about what political leaders want to do next. Dnevni Avaz pg 5, mentioned on cover 'I am convinced that politicians want to restart process of constitutional changes again' by Fena and Srna - McElhaney also wonders what opponents of the reforms are doing about it now: "I would love to see if they can do any better and what is exactly that they can do." He added the outcome of the vote in the Parliament was the greatest sanction against all people in the country, underlying some of the solutions were extremely hard to agree during the talks which made this only the first phase of the reform. Diklic - Daily writes about the unannounced visit of the Serbian President Boris Tadic to Laktasi and his meeting with the RS Prime Minister Milorad Dodik behind the closed doors where they apparently discussed issue of the ICTY indictees. Following the meeting, Tadic was asked by media to comment statements by some politicians in the RS who link the situation in Kosovo and the RS speculating about possibility of separating the entity. Such solutions could only be counterproductive." Dodik stated that he introduced Tadic with the constitutional changes process and its failure, as well as about the current work of Police Reform Directorate [PRD] and possible further developments in this process. Daily also reports that following Dodik's and Tadic's statements to the press, RS President Dragan Cavic and BiH Foreign Minister Mladen Ivanic also joined them. Asked to comment on the stance of High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy Javier Solana who said consensus does not need to be reached in BiH to realise police reform, Ivanic replied anyone who thinks it is possible to reach an agreement without consensus is wrong because nothing imposed can function. Asked whether he agrees with High Representative Christian Schwarz-Schilling, who said the independence of Kosovo would not leave any consequences with regard to stability in BiH, Ivanic said Kosovo issue might cause consequences in the region unless Belgrade and Pristine resolve the issue through an agreement and he noted there would be consequences if a solution is imposed.

Ivanic thinks F BiH parties should ensure an additional support to the changes, i.e. persuade the two delegates that had voted against amendments to support it next time, while Izetbegovic reiterated SDA hopes the negotiations would continue as soon as possible, but the reality shows this might take place only after elections.

That is the catch when it comes to SBiH- cash. Founder and his followers are to be found where there is cash ... Belkic is among them as well... He is certainly aware of taking up one of the key roles in the entire story of the constitutional changes, but he only did so for his own interest. If the Patriotic Bloc gets any function after October elections, Belkic is certain it will belong to him.." concludes Sagolj.
