BHT 1 int with former PDHR Hays on constitutional changes	BHT 1 by Laura Bosnjak - The U.S Congress should discuss proposal on the changes to the Dayton Constitution next week. Second was Spanish Carlos Westendorp, (1997-99) remembered for the first decision to remove high-ranked SDS official, Nikola Poplasen, election of state flag and national anthem tune. Next, Wolfgang Petritsch, Austrian, (until 2002) whose legacy include removal of a numerous officials, including all HDZ leaders Fourth, and the current HR: Paddy Ashdown, British, in position since May 2002. Talking about the latter, the author says: 'Experience of all divided societies in small European countries shows that 3 possibilities are being offered to BiH: co-existence of peoples, breakdown of the state or assimilation of smaller segments by bigger ones. By all accounts, it would be of crucial importance for BiH that it can reach a consent at least with regard to general undesirability of the last 2 options: breakdown and assimilation. Without such first step, firmly agreed upon and permanently binding, every talk about a change of Dayton, about introduction of 'a functional' and 'normal' state is just an illusion or demagogic throwing of dust into eyes.' Same editorial published by Dani magazine.
Dani: Mostar still not unified; Interview with MIU Director Williams	Dani , pgs 36-37, continued on pg 76 'United against unification', by Eldin Hadzovic – Magazine carries a lengthy article/commentary on the process of unification of the City of Mostar dominated by negative commentaries by the journalist who argues that the progress is not as good as the local authorities claim to be. Hadzovic lists that there are still streets named after Lorkovic , Francetic and Budak , that many institutions are still divided/parallel and that only one high school in Mostar got unified, the 'Mostar Grammar School', which according to Hadzovic is being run as a 'two schools under one roof' school. Regarding the issue of hiring of civil servants in the Mostar City administration, Hadzovic underlines that the City administration is hiring more Croats than it should be, and the author claims to have learned from an anonymous source in the City administration that the remaining vacancies will be filled by the SDA cadres. Allegedly, that issue was agreed by Bakir Izetbegovic , Murat Coric , Hamdija Jahic and other prominent SDA officials. Inset 'A lot of things have been done, some have not been' carries a short interview with the Director of Mostar Implementation Unit', Richard Williams , who lists achievements in Mostar such as the unified city council and unified budget, formal unification of institutions etc. Responding to the journalist's remark that the national balance in the City administration is not correct, Williams notes that several internal transfers had to take place, because there were not enough qualified Bosniaks. "We issued external vacancies in order to avoid favouring of some parties" , added Williams. As for other institutions that are yet to be unified, Williams says there are not political problems, there are problems because many companies and institutions are in big debts, which makes the unification process difficult. "Everything that could be done at the city level was indeed done, issues at the cantonal level are yet to be solved" , notes Williams.
D. Davidson on problems in education area, BiH's way to Europe	Dnevni List pg 8, mentioned on cover 'BiH has good laws only on paper' by I. Glibusic carries an interview with Head of the OSCE Mission in BiH Ambassador Douglas Davidson . Asked as to what are the main problems in application of the Framework Law on Primary and Secondary Education, Davidson says: 'The thing is that you have a very good law on paper, however, it is not being applied in practice in many places.' Asked as to where BiH should make biggest steps in order to approach European processes, Davidson says that he believes that, first of all, during negotiations with Europe, BiH will have to change a big part of current laws and politicians would have to leave their narrow interests aside.
