Zagreb

The Coalition of the Social-Democrat Party, led by Ivica Racan, and the Croatian Social-Liberal Party, led by Drazen Budisa, started celebrating their victory in the parliamentary elections in Croatia. Out of ten election constituencies in the Republic of Croatia, this coalition has won in eight of them. The only voting constituency where HDZ had a bigger number of votes was the Brodsko-Posavska. The Coalition of the above mentioned parties, SDP and the HSLS achieved the best result in the Zagreb voting constituency, receiving more than 50% of votes. In BiH and the Diaspora, the biggest number of votes was received by the HDZ party. This was announced last night when the latest unofficial results were presented. The report for TV INFO from Zagreb was produced by Gordana

Simonovic.

This was followed by a live interview with the Vice President of the Social-Democratic Party, Zdravko Tomac, from Zagreb for TV INFO. He said that the Coalition of the SDP and HSLs parties had formulated their positions towards BiH years ago and that they wanted and hoped that BiH would improve its democracy, and would be a multi-cultural, multi-national and multi-religious country and that all citizens would be equal all over BiH. He added that they wanted Croats in BiH, together with the other two peoples in BiH, to establish such a Bosnia and Herzegovina. Zdravko Tomac added that the strong democratic changes in the Republic of Croatia would certainly enhance democratic changes in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

A report on the first reactions of the defeated, HDZ party followed. The Vice President of the party, Mate Granic, announced a need for a special congress of the party. He said that any party which loses the elections has to call a special congress and choose a new leadership. The winners were much more optimistic. The President of the Social-Democratic Party, Ivica Racan, said that citizens of Croatia supported those who offered the country necessary changes.

A poll made on the streets in Zagreb and Kiseljak on what the citizens think about the victory of the Coalition was presented.
