Kidnapped child rescued by police	BHT, FTV, RTRS, Oslobodjenje cover page, pgs 4-5 'Kidnapped Mak Varesanovic freed', Dnevni Avaz cover page, pgs 2-3 'The boy freed, one kidnapper death', Nezavisne Novine cover and pg 2 'A boy released, kidnappers arrested' by M. Cubro-D.Muminovic, Slobodna Dalmacija, pg 70 'Boy freed, kidnapper killed', by Dinko Pasic, Dnevni List, pg 38 '7-year old son returns to Varesanovic family', not signed – Mak Varesanovic, seven years old son of Mirza Varesanovic, Sports Director of Sarajevo Football Club, was rescued on Friday by police after he was kidnapped two days ago. Child was kidnapped in front of his school, not far from his house and kidnappers have asked a ransom of €1 million. His father Mirza says that he would like to express his gratitude to everyone who has participated in this action, explaining that even though he was ordered not to contact the Police he did it because he knew that Police is the only one who can save his child. Sarajevo Canton Police Commissioner Himzo Selimovic said that police have gathered very significant information in a short period, which have resulted with arrest of several persons. One of the kidnappers was self-injured by his own gun and he died afterwards as several more are in escape. They belong to an organised group of criminals from several countries.

Journalists/media: Dnevni Avaz violates basic journalistic rules	BHT – Dnevni Avaz, independent television 99 and San have published pictures of a kidnapped child Mak Varesanovic and on that way informed kidnappers that everyone know about their deeds and even though those journalists consider that they have done nothing wrong, experts feel that they have harshly violated basic rules of journalism and placed their interests before the victim's. At Dnevni Avaz, they explain that they haven't jeopardise the boy, the mafia did and they have only did their job, informed the public about increasing criminality. "With publishing of this information, about kidnapping of little Mak Varesanovic, we have probably warned parents to keep an eye on their children, when Police can't protect them..."- said Fahrudin Djapo, Dnevni Avaz Editor-in-Chief. Journalists' Associations and media, who decided not to publish this information, harshly condemn this move of Dnevni Avaz. "This is an evident violation of a code, article of the code about protection of a minor, which says that photos of a child must not be published without parents' permission and that child's life must not be endangered by publishing of a photo and name"- said Borka Rudic, General Secretary of the BiH Independent Union of Professional Journalists. Dario Novalic of Start magazine, wonders is the news worth of a child's life. "I think that from a professional and ethical point of view, this is one clear situation, which shouldn't have happened, at any price...", said Emir Habul, member of BiH Press Council. Journalists from Serbia and Croatia, Dragan Biserovic and Boris Dezulovic, said that in such the cases the human morality and journalists' ethics have prevailed in their respective countries, even though media there are also not immune to lobbying for some perverse public interest. At the end Reporter concluded that BiH Press Council is the only relevant body which can take in the measures in cases of violation of journalists' ethics, but it reaches only a (self) regulatory measure, which comprehends that media or the journalist will realize his mistake by his own, but the question is who is expected to realize this mistake and what kind of public are we if we are interested in the pictures of a kidnapped child. Oslobodjenje pg 5 'Fundamental journalistic rules breeched' carried parts of the TV report on the issue.

Croats of Glamoc prevent removal of Croat flags	Vecernji List, pg 3 'You can remove us, but you cannot chase us away', mentioned on front 'Croats of Glamoc prevent pulling down of Croat flag', by Zeljka Mihaljevic, Slobodna Dalmacija, pg 7 'Croats save flag by charging', by Frano Mioc – Some 300 Croats of Glamoc did not allow removal of the Canton 10 flags in Glamoc (with the Croat symbols), which was supposed to be carried out at the order of the Head of Municipality, Rade Gvero (SDS). Apparently, a crane that was supposed to carry out the removal, which was escorted by Police, was prevented from doing so, and apparently the protesters threw rock at both the crane and Police. There were no injured and the flags remained flying. Glas Srpske cover page story 'A fight over "sahovnica" by SL. S. also covered the issue.

Cooperation with ICTY/PfP/political developments/reforms

Ashdown carefully considering the implications of NATO's assessment/reactions to possible sanctions against RS	Herceg Bosna Radio, BHT, FTV, RTRS, Oslobođenje pg 3, mentioned on cover 'Measures against RS to be announced on December 16', Dnevni Avaz pg 4, mentioned on cover 'Ashdown to announce measures on December 16', ONASA – NATO's communique highlights continued non-compliance of the RS authorities with the ICTY. It calls for the need to improve security and law enforcement structures, supporting the assessment made by the ICTY, High Representative Paddy Ashdown said on Friday. Chief ICTY Prosecutor Carla Del Ponte addressed the UNSC (United Nations Security Council) earlier this month where she noted that there are fundamental systematic weaknesses build into the law enforcement and security structures in the RS. While BiH has made progress on defence reform, this lack of compliance means that for a second time running, BiH failed to meet the requirements to join NATO's Partnership for Peace. Once again, BiH's failure to cooperate fully with ICTY is the main obstacle to this country becoming a stable, peaceful and prosperous European democracy, according to Ashdown. Recent revelations in both the domestic and international press that the RS Army continue to protect Ratko Mladic support the assessment of both NATO and the Chief Prosecutor. These revelations indicate that as recently as six months ago, General Mladic was sheltering in the military facility at Han Pijesak. This could not have happened without the systemic connivance of high-ranking members of the RS military. The very instruments that are supposed to catch war criminals are in fact protecting them, the HR emphasized in his statement. "I am now carefully considering the implications of NATO's assessment. I am also actively considering measures that will address the systemic deficiencies highlighted by both NATO and the ICTY Chief Prosecutor. This will take a little time," Ashdown said. "In addition, when considering what measures are appropriate, I will want to take into account the outcome of the Police Reform Commission, which finishes on 15th December. I will announce my decisions after the Chairman of the PRC issues his assessment, on 16th December," he added. Nezavisne Novine cover 'Paddy Ashdown: New penalties for RS will be announced on 16 December' and pg 3 'Decision on measures towards RS will be announced on 16 December' by S. Gojkovic; EuroBlic cover 'Ashdown is already making the list for removals' and RSpg 1 'Ashdown is making the lsits' by Rajna Radosavljevic-Nedeljka Breherina; Glas Srpske pg 2 'Decision on 16 December' by N. Zelenovic, Dnevni List, pg 5 'Ashdown punishes authorities in Republika Srpska', by Nermin Bise, Vecernji List, pg 5 'Waiting for results of Police reform', by dja also carried the HR statement. DL carries one of leaders of the SNSD, Nikola Spiric, as saying that the RS Government is completely responsible for the fact that the main ICTY indictees are still at large. "It would appear that that the executive authorities are more stable in the situation when the economic situation becomes more difficult and when the cooperation with The Hague and IC is getting worse. You cannot find it anywhere else in the world", says Spiric. DL also carries the Bosniak member of BiH Presidency, Sulejman Tihic, who hopes that the High Representative for BiH, Paddy Ashdown, will punish the RS authorities. "First target of NATO and whole IC will be the RS MoI. I cannot prejudice things, but if they have not done anything yet, the logical question is whether there is a justification to have the said Ministry", says Tihic. Glas Srpske pg 2 under 'Barometer' carries the statement of Bosko Siljegovic, Head of Serb Caucus at BiH HoP, commenting on the NATO communiqué. He says that: "If NATO communiqué expressed concern exclusively over the RS failure to cooperate with the ICTY, this statement is partially correct. However, RS has fulfilled all other duties stipulated by the DA, including numerous reforms at BiH level."

Times: Massacre general kept from justice by old allies	Times 'Massacre general' kept from justice by old allies' by Nich Hawton – Ratko Mladic, the former Bosnian Serb military commander indicted for war crimes, has escaped capture by Nato forces for eight years because he has been protected by the Serb and Bosnian Serb militaries, documents obtained by The Times conclusively demonstrate. The documents, which include his military file, show that General Mladic remained a member of the Army until February 2002, more than six years after he was indicted for war crimes including genocide. He still receives a military pension of about £250 a month. The documents show that General Mladic has returned to what was his military headquarters – barely an hour from the Nato headquarters in Sarajevo – on several occasions to drink with his old colleagues on their birthdays and join them on hunting expeditions. They also show that General Mladic, who is believed to have spent most of his fugitive years in Serbia, was advised to leave that country after it elected a pro-Western President, Boris Tadic, in June. He slipped across the border into Bosnia. Acting on that intelligence, Nato conducted a big operation on July 1 to capture him. But he again slipped the net, apparently with the help of members of the Bosnian Serb military, to whom he remains a hero. Lord Ashdown of Norton-sub-Hamdon, the chief international envoy to Bosnia, told The Times yesterday: "Rather than hunting down war criminals, this information indicates that certain Bosnian Serb institutions, as recently as this summer, are actively protecting war criminals. This shouldn't be allowed to continue and will jeopardise Bosnia's attempts to join the EU and Nato." Next week Lord Ashdown is expected to announce measures against Bosnian Serb institutions, including the military, for their failure to act against indicted war criminals. FTV, Oslobodjenje pg 3 'RS, SCG armies hiding Mladic', Dnevni Avaz pg 4 'Armies of RS, SCG still supporting Ratko Mladic' carried excerpts from the Times article.

Colak believes that what happened during the Thursday’s session of the MCC is a case of SDA Mostar getting disobedient towards the SDA top. Colak says: “I talked to Tihic (Sulejman) two days ago, after the session (of the MCC), and what happened there I cannot ascribe it to Tihic. It is obvious that some members of the party are disobeying the party’s leadership, especially in Mostar, it is now down to the SDA to act within its own ranks”. Human rights

Conference on the occasion of the International Human Rights Day

Herceg Bosna Radio, BHT, FTV, RTRS, Oslobođenje pg 7 'Decertified policemen an example of human rights abuse', Dnevni Avaz pg 9, FENA – On the occasion of December 10 – the International Day of Human Rights, the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights on Friday organized a conference on privatization, social protection and health, gender violence, human trafficking, and on human rights and law enforcement. At the beginning of the conference, the BiH Council of Ministers Chair, Adnan Terzic, said that the European Charter on Human Rights is an integral part of the BiH Constitution, and that a legal framework exists for the protection of human rights. It is up to us, stressed Terzic, to build a system and adopt standards to ensure that the European Charter on Human Rights is respected and that the number of human rights violations is reduced. "If we were to design an analysis of the rate of human rights violations since the nineties to date, we would have a tendency of constant improvements every day. However, we cannot be satisfied as long as we have a single case of human rights violations", said Terzic. He stressed that the representatives of the international community are also violating the rights of BiH citizens, and that he has recently launched a procedure with the Venice Commission regarding the violation of rights of the decertified police officers. The Head of the Office of the UN Commissioner for Human Rights, Madeleine Rees, said that the state is responsible for protection of human rights, but noted that the international community has an enormous power, which carries an enormous responsibility as well. "The international community must be equally responsible when it comes to the human rights...We must work with the people in the government in order to have a self-sustaining system of human rights protection," said Rees.
