Srebrenica Anniversary/War Crimes

Tenth anniversary of Srebrenica massacre to be marked today

Oslobodjenje pg 2 'Burial of 610 victims', Dnevni Avaz pg 2, AFP – Tens of thousands of people were expected to gather near the Bosnian town of Srebrenica on Monday to mark the 10th anniversary of Europe's worst massacre since World War II, and also to bury the remains of some 600 victims. The commemoration of the killing of some 8,000 Muslim men and boys by Bosnian Serb forces is expected to be tense, notably since police last week found large quantities of explosives near the memorial cemetery in Potocari, just outside the town.

International dignitaries including Foreign Ministers Philippe Douste-Blazy of France, Jack Straw of Britain and Bernard Bot of The Netherlands are expected to join massacre survivors and families of victims at the ceremony. Organisers are expecting some 50,000 people to attend. For the first time a top Serbian delegation will attend the Srebrenica commemoration, with the delegation being led by President Boris Tadic. The genocide at Srebrenica is the basis of the key charges laid by the UN war crimes tribunal against former Yugoslav president Slobodan Milosevic, who has been on trial at The Hague court for three years. Over 1,500 police are expected to secure the area around the memorial cemetery where 610 victims, aged between 14 and 75, are to be buried during the ceremony. The remains of victims were found in mass graves, more than 60 of which have been uncovered in the area since the end of Bosnia's 1992-95 war. Over 1,300 bodies, identified by DNA analysis, have been buried so far at the cemetery but there are still more than 4,500 body bags filled with human bones awaiting identification.
