	Judiciary

SB on 'conflict' between foreign and domestic judges and prosecutors	Slobodna Bosna pgs 18-22 'Foreigners leave BiH judiciary in a stampede' by Adnan Buturovic – Following several departures of the foreign judges/prosecutors from the BiH judiciary in the past several months, SB carries that the most recent case of the UK judge Richard Garlick, "is just one in a series of incidents which discloses the chaos in the highest judicial institution caused by the OHR and foreign judges/prosecutors." Garlick says left for purely personal reason, i.e. affair he allegedly had in BiH. US prosecutor Jonathan Schmidt [for whom SB claims failed earlier to join ICTY Prosecution] left as soon as he processed the war crimes case [against Abdulahim Maktouf] adding it in his CV. Accusing him even of fabricating the story that mujahedins threatened his life [which led to arrest of Pakistani Ahmed Istikar], magazine indicates Schmidt was incompetent prosecutor whose poor performance led to acquittals of Hasan Cengic and former Deputy of Interpol Director, Asim Fazlic. Swedish prosecutor, Mats Mattson, reads the article, was previously employed by the OHR, who objected indictments against Lijanovici brothers, and went back to Sweden after getting the job of Swedish State Prosecutor. SB also accused OHR of instructing the Center for Investigative Journalism to write an article accusing Rwandan judge Gerald Gahima of illegal financial transactions in his home country, which led to his departure. SB says that the main reason for "a fight" between foreign and domestic experts is money, as in 2006 their salaries will be harmonized and subject to the BiH budget. "If one compares the results of the domestic judges/ prosecutors to those of foreigners, there is a shocking conclusion that foreign experts have done nothing," says SB further giving an example of the General Crime Department [staffed by domestic staff] which filed over 300 indictments and carried out in entirety about 85% of cases, while the Special Crime Department lead by John McNair had a series of failures in cases against Ante Jelavic, Senad Kobilic, Fazlic and Cengic. Inset carries that Chief Prosecutor, Marinko Jurcevic, also objected the appointments of foreign judges/prosecutors to a year contract, warning McNair he will not approve any other for a less than two years. Jurcevic was supported in this by the new Register, American Michael Th. Johnson, who is allegedly in conflict with Paddy Ashdown over appointments of foreigners. According to SB's source in OHR, Johnson is not ready to appoint Ashdown's staff from OHR Legal or Anti-Corruption Departments to be downsized/closed down. Johnson believes that war crimes cases must be processed by the domestic staff, further discussing this with the key ICTY officials, BiH Court President Meddzida Kreso and Chief Prosecutor Marinko Jurcevic. "BiH Court, used until now by Ashdown for political pressures against 'disobedient' politicians, could become the highest judicial institution staffed by domestic employees," concludes the article.
