Speculations on Ratko Mladic's arrest stirs great confusion among media, public	BHT1 by Vesna Simic [from Belgrade]– The speculations on alleged apprehension and transfer of Ratko Mladic to the Hague have stirred both great confusion among media and public on Tuesday afternoon. In the late afternoon, Serbian news agency BETA reported Mladic was arrested in Serbia, which was further carried out by agencies in the region and worldwide. BHT 1 late news reported Tanjug news agency was the first one to release the information, as well as Bijeljina-based TV station 'BN'. According to SRNA news agency from BiH, the operation of Mladic's arrest started on Tuesday in Serbia. Belgrade TV station B92 reported that Mladic had been arrested on Tuesday morning and transferred to the EUFOR base in Tuzla, BiH in the afternoon, for further transfer to the Hague. The Associated Press published that according to unnamed highly ranking Serbian security official, Mladic has been located, and the negotiations on his surrender were ongoing. Official Belgrade denied the speculations twice. However, media further reported that Serbian Government scheduled an extraordinary session for 20:30 on Tuesday, which – according to journalists – indicated that something was going on. PINK – It also carried that unnamed high-ranked RS Ministry of Interior official stated for news agency SRNA that RS MoI cannot confirm the information that Mladic has been arrested; he added that, since RS and Serbian police structures cooperate very closely – especially when it comes to search for the persons indicted for war crimes – it is almost impossible that RS MoI would not be informed about such important operation. Former, also unnamed, high ranked RS Army officer stated for news agency SRNA that he personally does not believe that Mladic would be arrested alive. At 21hrs, PINK TV reports that it seems that the speculation was not correct, including the info on his possible transfer to Tuzla. Int press prominently cover speculations on Mladic arrest: Arrest more likely to happen, net closes on Mladic, Serbians – even nationalists – growing tired of former national hero	News on Ratko Mladic's alleged arrest were regularly reported by CNN, Sky News, Euronews, etc. throughout the day on Tuesday all stressing that information was still unconfirmed. HTV and NOVA TV stations in Croatia organized special news broadcasts, and German TV stations broadcast archive footage of Mladic. Print media also widely published the story, among others International Herald Tribune, Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, Der Spiegel, Die Stern, Die Presse, etc. In its top story of the day, BBC claims three key changes have made the arrest of either Radovan Karadzic or Mladic more likely: "The Serbian government has changed its attitude and is now co-operating with The Hague tribunal; IC has taken a series of coordinated steps to clamp down on the support networks allegedly protecting the two; A video showing killings of Srebrenica captives shocked many Serbs who, up until now, had simply not believed a massacre had taken place in Srebrenica in 1995. Serb public opinion has begun to change. And in the background all along has been the irrepressible figure of... Carla Del Ponte." Guardian's article ["After 10 years, net closes on genocide suspect"] also suggests that net around Mladic is closing down. It carries the "well-placed international source" that the negotiations with Mladic on his surrender were going on [New York Times claims the same]. Independent's correspondents from Belgrade [article was featured as cover splash story] also suggest that "net closes" Mladic and stresses there is new willingness in Serbia to have him arrested. Telegraph ["Ten years on and Mladic is left with nowhere to hide"] agrees with the later, and adds: "The nationalists who once worshipped the truculent leader of the Bosnian Serb army have started to grow tired of their hero... Ordinary Serbs are also turning against him. A recent poll showed 57 per cent favoured extraditing Mladic to The Hague." London Times reports of the alleged negotiations with Mladic on surrender, adding that this was being done "by a group of politicians, clerics and military officers – all Serb, with no outside interference." The reported Mladic's arrest and alleged extradition to the Tribunal was welcomed as good news for Serbia by the Sueddeutsche Zeitung, and Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung bring feature on Mladic [focusing on background, especially his role in Srebrenica events] as cover splash story. Both Frankfurter Rundschau and Austrian Kurier report on the cases, stressing the confusion it raised. Die Zeit's cover splash story focuses on statement by SCG Foreign Minister Vuk Draskovic that Mladic's arrest is in interest of Serbia.

Constitutional changes

SNSD, SDS, PDP hold joint press conference on const. changes; Cavic: final solution must be equally "good and bad" for all peoples in BiH

RTRS- At the joint press conference held in Banja Luka on Tuesday, the SDS President Dragan Cavic, SNSD leader Milorad Dodik and PDP President Mladen Ivanic rejected speculations the agreement on the constitutional changes would be damaging for the RS. Leaders of three strongest political parties in the RS emphasized that the framework agreement on const. changes reached in Sarajevo on Sunday was acceptable for all three peoples: it includes tripartite BiH Presidency with rotation every 16 months, and entity vote in BiH House of Representatives. "One [Presidency] member would be elected from RS, and two from FBiH... After that the Parliament, on basis of votes number or some other criteria, would decide who would be the first President of the Presidency," explained Dodik. Three officials, expressing satisfaction with the talks, underlined such outcome of the 'hardest part' of talks on this issue legalized and strengthened the RS status in the new constitutional organisation of BiH. "The final solution must be both equally good and... "bad" for all sides for those negotiations to be successful. There is no other way... one satisfied and one dissatisfied side would mean failure of the entire project", stated Cavic. "I think that this is a compromise... parties from RS have assured changes on a state level, but they have also preserved the basic values of entity which they – we – represent. And I think that it is a fair compromise; whoever thought that he could come out as a winner has made a big mistake", concluded Ivanic. Glas Srpske pg 5 'We will lose nothing' Inset 'Competences' by Z. PINK – "We have gathered here to say that we are for the constitutional changes, but radical constitutional changes. RHB, Oslobodjenje pg 2 'Future of Croats in hands of HDZ'– HSS also criticized the manner the last talks on constitutional changes were lead, because they were lead without representatives of Croat people.

British Ambassador Rycroft on constitutional changes: I believe that an agreement can be reached in couple of days	Dnevni Avaz pg 5 'I expect agreement in couple of days', mentioned on cover 'Next opportunity is 2010' by Sead Numanovic – Speaking of talks on constitutional changes in an interview for DA, British Ambassador Matthew Rycroft said: "Negotiations of political leaders on changing the BiH Constitution are heading the right direction. I remind that BiH is an independent state with all attributes of the state no matter what they are like.'

Hard work is ahead	Oslobodjenje pg 9 'At the end' op-ed by Senka Kurtovic – Commenting announcements by party leaders that the agreement in the talks on constitutional changes is near, editorial reads that it sounds cheap if the only change we know about is Presidency in rotation. Author comments that we can be optimists thank to the fact that SBiH "joined by couple or more mainly non-significant and parties with no influence". Editorial concludes: "Talks are at the end. Hard work is ahead."
NN op-ed: distribution of seats and constitutional changes cause headaches to politicians	Nezavisne Novine op-ed pg 7 'Personnel policy' by Natasa Krsman – Opening the article with the observation that it is evident this year will also be marked with personnel distributions and party agreements, the author highlights the fact that along with the personnel policy, the issue of constitutional changes causes headaches to political leaders as well. On this she concludes by saying that "the protection of the national interest will again come to distribution of functions in somewhat differently structured state".

SD op-ed: Constitutional changes agreed upon btwn Bosniaks and Serbs only/Stronger pressures for RS' secession have been expected	Slobodna Dalmacija pg 19 'Covic and Halilovic's mouth shut up' by Z. Tulic learns that absence of HDZ, HNZ and SBiH negotiators at the meeting on constitutional changes held on Sunday was arranged in advance by SDA and RS parties. SD says that the reason for such arrangement is the intention to get consent of the RS parties first and consent of the Croat side on the same issue would be demanded these days. SD concludes that it turns out that all this time the Croat side had a walk-on role without an attempt to impose some solution, if it had any. The article concludes that it turns out that constitutional changes were agreed between Serbs and Bosniaks only and this means even bigger inter-entity division for the future of BiH and stronger pressures from the RS for secession of this entity have been expected.

Bosniak member to BiH
Presidency: SiCG
should prove it is not guilty for aggression
before the Court

Vecernje Novosti pg 4 'Prove you are not guilty' by Dusan Stojakovic – In a half-page interview to daily, Sulejman Tihic, Bosniak member to BiH Presidency, speaks of BiH suit against SiCG, relations between the two states and the past war.
On the suit, Tihic says that trial on this will not disturb good neighbourhood relations between the two states, but instead would bring the truth about developments in BiH, noting "If SICG claims there was no aggression, it should prove it at Court." He denies journalist claim (which referred to foreign intelligence information) that there had been around 10 thousand mujahedeens in BiH during the war, adding: "According to current data, there are 600 to 700 persons of Afro-Asian origin, and around 200 of them stayed in BiH. And now data on their citizenship is being examined." He says it is not possible to file suit against Croatia akin to suit against SiCG, noting Croatian side in BiH would place veto on such initiative. He reiterates that nothing in BiH should be named after any of the three peoples, referring to RS name.

The audit report on RAK's financial operations says that RAK purchased office premises for 4 millions KM and this amount does not correspond to the Study on extra funds' expenditure in which 2,6 millions KM were envisaged for this purpose. People from RAK say that this Study is their internal document and there is no any obligation that it should be respected.
