Covic is convinced BiH HDZ will win majority of Croat's votes at October elections and says that the establishing of HDZ 1990 would not put BiH HDZ in jeopardy. He added he believes the court proceedings carried out against him in "Lijanovici" case before BiH Court would be completed by October elections. DL: Division of HDZ could improve Croats' turnout in October elections	Dnevni List, front pg splash and pg 3 'Division of HDZ makes Croats vote', by Ivica Glibusic – DL notices that the number of Croat voters has been decreasing with every elections, which is reflected in the fact that the so far the strongest Croat political party, the HDZ BiH that is, has won 338.440 votes in 1996 elections, whilst in 2002, it won 114.207 votes. Sociologist Slavo Kukic believes reason behind this is that nothing significantly changes in BiH, including the politicians on the scene, which made the electorate 'tired' of voting. However, he believes that the division of the HDZ BiH into HDZ BiH and HDZ 1990 could be the trigger behind an increased turnout believing that a part of electorate will simply vote against (HDZ BiH President) Dragan Covic's lobby.
IRI poll: most of BiH citizens do not know when elections will be held	Nezavisne Novine pg 6 'Almost a half of citizens do not know when elections would be held' by S. BiH Diaspora not informed about the changes to the election procedure	Hayat by Zumra Arnautovic – Although it is only four months until the election in BiH, Hayat carries that BiH Diaspora still does not know how would they vote in October. The turnout of voters in diaspora was disastrous last time they were supposed to vote, and the main reason was too complicated election process. This time, the voting procedure is simplified, mainly thanks to the fact that decision on passive voters' registration has been adopted. But, according to unnamed representative of BiH diaspora, BiH citizens in other countries do not know anything about those changes, because nobody informed them, and the information on passive voters' registration is not possible to find even on the web-site of the Election Commission. He added that, according to some unofficial information, only BiH citizens with valid CIPS identification documents would be able to vote in October; the problem is that only 40 percent of BiH citizens in diaspora so far managed to obtain those documents, which means that more than a half of BiH citizens in other countries would not be able to vote in October.

Dautefendic – commenting on the return of Haris Silajdzic behind the helm of the SBIH, the author says in reality he never left the office of president of SBIH since he has always been pulling the strings from the shadow, and now he returns in order to try and become a member of BiH Presidency. Dautefendic calls the whole process of election of new SBIH leader a farce since Silajdzic was the only candidate, claiming that the former chairman of SBIH Presidency, Safet Halilovic, had had a task to safeguard Silajdzic's office from others, which he did magnificently, "and that's why he will be rewarded with another ministerial duty".

NN op-ed: Courts should be dealing with Silajdzic	Nezavisne Novine op-ed pg 7 'Silajdzic's comeback' by Rubina Cengic – Referring to the election of Haris Silajdzic to the position of Party for BiH President, the author reminds he had even announced he would run for BiH Presidency member 'although courts should be dealing with him because he had been pulling the state into debts without anyone's knowledge'. He reiterated that the stance of his party, SNSD, is that the constitutional changes are too serious issue and, therefore, it is impossible to implement these in next four months. DL: OHR is responsible for situation in Mostar by enacting undemocratic Statute	Dnevni List, pg 2 'Responsibility for Mostar', by Ivica Glibusic – commenting on last week's statement by the High Representative, Christian Schwarz-Schilling, who said that political parties in Mostar failed to assume political responsibility for situation in the city, Glibusic argues it is the OHR that is responsible since it imposed an undemocratic Mostar Statute, which is abused by political parties to block processes. The author sees the remedy in annulling that Statute and enacting a new one, which will be in line with legislation of other cities in BiH, which will in turn make sure that the political parties do become responsible, not like now when powers that be from outside use the Statute to block everything.
