Asked allegations he made against RS Police Director, Radomir Njegus, Dodik says that he possesses information that Njegus has been involved in the crime activities regarding the vehicles thefts, but also to head network that assists Radovan Karadzic. "I keep saying this for longer time. They respond to every request we send and we have no problems with them. As for Croat side, we have expressed our dissatisfaction with them several times. The issue of failure to arrest fugitives doesn't exist, however for long time now we cannot obtain certain documents from so-called Herceg-Bosna. Therefore, a request for documents we have been asking for two year has been sent to them at the end of July. Now, we are waiting for the response and it is too early to say estimate whether we will get them or not." She denied speculations that ICTY threatened it would ask for removal of Croat officials if documents demanded is not submitted. "We have only a power to inform institutions which established the Tribunal on what kind of relationship with have with certain side. They would decide what will be done about it eventually," said Hartmann adding that RS still has not proved its intention for better cooperation with the Tribunal. RS2 'Salkic: Census would legalise ethnic cleansing committed during the war' by Rajna Radosavljevic – Bosniak Caucus at RS Council of Peoples on Thursday brought an initiative on protection of vital national interests because of, as they say, 'cosmetic changes to the Law on Territorial Organization', by which the Constitutional Court decision on abolishing national insignia from names of towns was outwitted. According to the Caucus President, Ramiz Salkic, RS authority knew that the changes would not be considered as a satisfactory solution, by which they have showed an obvious politicising of the issue. He added that the Bosniak caucus has also brought an initiative on protection of vital national interests because of RS NA conclusion on census in BiH. He reminded that not all people have returned to their homes and said: 'Such a census would not reflect the ture situation in field and would represent a legalisation of ethnic cleansing'. Pejo Krnjic, the Deputy President of the Council of Peoples, has stated that he does not expect that they, at the CoP or the Joint Commission of CoP and RS NA, can harmonize stances on this issue. 'This time, the dispute will not be forwarded to the Constitutional Court of RS because if both a Chairman and Deputy Chairman bring an initiative on protection of vital national interest, disputable decisions are returned to the Government, which cannot enact the same act again', Krnjic said.

RTRS – Bosniak Club says that the names of towns which which were a result of ethnical cleansing are unacceptable. "If we would think in that way, than BiH would not be named BiH, and many places around the world don't reflect the name of their citizens' nationality, and that cannot be discussed" Desanka Radjevic said.

The Commission will try to harmonize stances regarding the conclusion of Bosniak delegates, in accordance with which the changes to the Law on the coat of arms, flag, hymn and territorial organization jeopardises their national interests. 'If the Commission fails to harmonize stances, then the issue will be sent to the RS Constitutional Court. If the Council of Peoples reaches a compromise that differs from the original version of RS NA decision, then the proposal will be returned to the Government...', Radjovic stated.

EuroBlic, cover 'Names of towns are still disputable' and pg. RS2 'Salkic: Census would legalise ethnic cleansing committed during the war' by Rajna Radosavljevic –The article also carries Radjevic statement expressing her disbelief that the CoP would be able to harmonize stances regarding the issue. 'The Joint Commission of CoP and RS NA would not be of any help to us either', Radjovic said.

He added he doesn't know when this could happen, but adds that lessening visa application process would precede complete abolishment. He stressed that such development would follow up authorities' assurances that the legal system has been professional, that ID cards cannot be forged, and that borders crossing and migration issues are regulated in accordance with European standards. Vecernji List pg 5 'Poverty is being resolved through tax system' by R. The High Representative Paddy Ashdown believes that the money for such service would better serve being spend on something else: "The good thing is that the Croatian Government can do a great part of work. It is good that you have High Representative and I could lobby for you. I told your Prime Minister: if you complete all [the things] on time I would visit the European countries and lobby for you."

GS story on population census	Glas Srpske, cover page story 'Running away from one's own shadow' by R. The article reminds of the statement of Safet Halilovic, the President of the Party for BiH, who has claimed that the census would 'legalize the ethnic cleansing'. The article says that the other side of the story – banishment of Serb people from the Federation of BiH, obviously does not exist for Halilovic and those who share his opinion. BiH Parliamentary Assembly HoP delegate Nade Radovic has stated that Bosniak politicians are avoiding the census because they are running away from truth. 'After the census is conducted, we will be able to provide with a true image of what is called ethnic cleansing. By running away from the Law on census, one runs away from the truth with which we all have to face. I believe both Houses of BiH Parliamentary Assembly will adopt the Law on Census', Radovic said.

NN op-ed on launch of pre-election campaign

Nezavisne Novine op-ed pg 7 'Pre-election reminder of jeopardy of people's' by Slavo Kukic – The author starts the column by referring to the most recent launch of pre-election campaign in BiH by BiH Election Commission, making a specific reference to a part of speech delivered by BiH Election Commission President, who called on political parties to affirm tolerance and inter-ethnic understanding in their speeches. The author wonders whether this call was "a must" which if disobeyed would face sanctions. On the other hand, Kukic notes that political parties in BiH have already launched pre-election campaigns: SDS launched it following removals of 59 officials, PDP also following HR's decisions, SDA during campaign on the change of name of Sarajevo Main street and demands regarding change of RS symbols, HDZ launched it during education reform process. He doubts possibility that any political party or its official – in process of expressing concern for its people – would notice and disclose the information that many young people of BiH would like to leave this state. Kukic further notes that it would be the easiest way for political parties and their officials during campaigns to speak about ethnic vulnerability and dangers coming from "the others". The author further stresses Paddy Ashdown should also contribute to this campaign and make it clear to political parties campaigns should not be filled with ethnic hatred. Accordingly, he should make it clear he would impose sanctions or undertake some measures, which should be even more drastic and radical than those he imposed against SDS.
