

OHR BiH TV News Summary, 14 Oct. 1997

Zagreb – The talks at ministerial level between BiH and Croatian delegations on the utilization of the port Ploče practically reached a deadlock today, underlined the report. The media highlighted the news furnishing details of the event. According to the report, the Croatian side insisted on introducing changes -firstly in protocol procedures – to end up with raising new questions. Namely, the joint meeting of the two delegations in the presence of American experts was delayed by an hour because the Croatian delegation insisted that the two delegations first conduct a meeting without the presence of American experts. Additional tension had been created because Croatian Deputy PM on several occasions referred to the BiH delegations as a FBiH delegation and Bosniaks.

The participants confronted their views on the understanding of the Washington Accords and to this related special relations between the two countries. The Croatian side declared that the issue of utilization of the port Ploče and the passage through Neum should be resolved within the framework of a new general agreement between Croatia and the FBiH. Hasan Muratovic, a member of the BiH delegation told the press “the BiH side favors the American version of the agreement (on confederate relations), while the Croatian side explicitly refused to accept this version as a basis for negotiations”.

The two delegations are supposed to meet in two weeks to reconsider their positions.
