News Summary

Bicakcic comments on New York Times report on corruption

BiH Federation Prime Minister Edhem Bicakcic stated that "the article in the New York Times, which is inaccurate, inflicted an enormous damage on BiH, and it is strange that the New York Times allowed itself the luxury of publishing such an article. I have always said that corruption is present in countries in transition and that BiH is not an exception." He added that an efficient way should be found to prevent such actions. Bicakcic announced that he would make a detailed report on all allegations mentioned in the New York Times article. Bicakcic concluded by saying, "there is corruption in places where BiH Federation institutions were not established".

Bakir Izetbegovic responds to accusations of corruption

One of the people mentioned in the New York Times article, Bakir Izetbegovic, issued a press release to deny accusations against him in the corruption report. "All of my property, after 18 years of work, is not worth more than DM 20,000, and the situation with my power is the same" Izetbegovic explained. "I have never received a bribe in my life. People who know me know very well that I do not receive any expensive presents or money enveloped".

Beslagic comments on report on corruption

Tuzla Mayor Selim Beslagic responded to the New York Times article by having said, "it is an elementary lie that Tuzla is a Muslim city, considering that more than 20 nations live there and Bosniaks represent only a relative majority." He explained that Tuzla's annual budget is KM 20 million, making it impossible to embezzle $500 million, and added that great harm was done to Tuzla by the article. "Corruption is not in Tuzla, but in Tuzla Canton" Beslagic stated.
