British democratic leader Ashdown began his testifies before the Hague Tribunal. Ashdown said that on May 6 1996, he had a dinner with Croatian delegation, led by Tudjman on the occasion of 50 years anniversary of winning over fascism. He asked Tudjman then what the former Yugoslavia areas will look like in 10 years. Tudjman then drew an outlined picture of Bosnia on a menu, splitting it in half with an "S" curve, and saying that everything on the West side will be in Croatia, and everything on the East will be in Serbia. Tudjman then said that there would be no Bosnia and that Moslems will be insignificant part of the Croatian Federation, besides, Moslems are only Croats and Serbs, too weak to resist Turks. Ashdown also said he was shocked with strength of racists quotes in Tudjman's approach to Moslems, and that Tudjman mentioned Izetbegovic the same night, calling him fundamentalist and an Algerian in Bosnia.
