

OHR BiH TV News Summary, 20 April 1998

Zvornik – After a long preparation, the exhumation of Bosniaks killed by the Serb powers during the occupation of Srebrenica in July 1995 started today, Liam Mc Dowell, UN Spokesman told Reuters. The first of the mass graves thought to hide the remains of the Serb genocide victims is the Brnice dam near Zvornik. At this location, six km far from Zvornik, pieces of the victim belongings were found as well as their bones and a large amount of empty cartridges by which the Srebrenica people were killed. This is the first location at which the Hague Tribunal is participating this year in exhumations in BiH.

Louise Arbour, the Tribunal Main Judge visited this mass scaffold to hear the first information. We are seeking here evidence to match with those we already have, Arbour told the news.
