

OHR BiH TV News Summary, 24 March 1999

Simon Haselock, deputy HR for media told a news conference that the OHR and IMC will not tolerate use of inflammatory language in reports on the crisis, TVBiH reported. Haselock said that several cases of such use were already reported and said TVBiH was one of those who used such phrases. This was followed by a statement of OSCE spokeswoman, Nicole Szulc. "There were some statements made by TVBiH anchor that were opinion not editorial commentary," Szulc said. Szulc added that it was an opinion on Milosevic and she did not want to discuss the TVBiH's newsperson's opinion. "The point is that the job of the presenter is to present the facts, and the viewers, listeners and readers will be certain to make up their own minds. People in this country are smart, they do not need to have ideas imposed," Szulc said. "That is the first thing, the other thing is: to make the kind of remarks like the ones made on BHT last night, transmitted in the RS and BiH, could unnecessarily inflame passions," OSCE spokeswoman said.

"The crew of the information-political program expresses regret for the clumsiness of our young colleague. We would like to ask our viewers to have in mind that last night's special TVBiH program on air strikes was a four hour live broadcast where the possibility of such mistakes is great," TVBiH news editor apologetically said.

RS Government willing to offer humanitarian aid to Yugoslavia

The RS Government is in permanent session, as reported by Milorad Dodik on Thursday. They condemn the continuation of air strikes and keep in constant contact with the Yugoslav Government in Belgrade. There are inclinations in the RS government to send a delegation to Yugoslavia offering to put their complete humanitarian potential at Yugoslavia's disposal. Dodik says that the RS Government should place a moratorium on aggressive party addresses, which deepen the abyss between them, and prevent the use of the situation in Yugoslavia to be manipulated for internal retributions. RS National Assembly Speaker Petar Djokic sees the air strikes as derogating to the UN mechanism and charter and that the attack on Yugoslavia seriously endangers all previous attempts on Dayton implementation made in BiH.

Westendorp and Haselock visit Croat cultural society, discuss Croat cultural and national identity in BiH

Croat Cultural Society 'Napredak' President Franjo Topic, in a meeting with High Representative Carlos Westendorp and Deputy High Representative for Media Simon Haselock, said that this society could work with other societies to heal their wounds. Westendorp stated that the diversity of BiH is exactly what the OHR wishes to preserve through cooperation, "but that we should not delude ourselves, for this will not be easy and will take time. It is exactly what we are attempting to do through the restructuring of BHT." Haselock said that it is important not to believe in the notion some people are suggesting that the IC is wishing to disenfranchise the Croat community from their language and culture, they want to promote specific Croat TV programming in their own language and targeted at their own people.
