The fifth session of the RS National Assembly (NA) resumed in Banja Luka today. The RS Prime Minister submitted a report on the work of the RS Government in the past 100 days, after which a discussion was opened amongst MPs. "What we are not satisfied with is what we have done so far to curb crime, as it took time to make the responsible institutions start functioning again". Addressing the MPs present, Dodik stressed the possibility shortly of a permanent solution to the issue of refugees and DPs. On the Brcko issue, Dodik expressed the hope that the final decision on the matter would be to the benefit of the RS. The Prime Minister went on to stress that the greatest progress made by the RS Government had been seen in foreign policy, where a number of contracts had been signed with international donors providing funds for different investments and reparation of war damage. During the subsequent discussion, much criticism was voiced by the SDS, particularly on the Brcko arbitration issue, who also claimed there had been an unequal distribution of resources between Eastern and Western parts of the RS.

(Live report from the session) The discussion on the Prime Minister's report is still ongoing. The RS Minister of Justice, Petko Cancar, stressed that the Government had not been able to include all necessary elements in the report for safety reasons. The RS Minister of Interior, Stankovic, informed the session that criminal charges had been brought against the former RS Prime Minister, Gojko Klickovic. During the third item on the agenda, the session will be discussing the work of RS representatives in common institutions, and, as a separate item, the elections scheduled for 12/13 September. At the request of the Government, the session will also hold an urgent discussion on the Law on Intelligence and Security Service, and the Law on amendments and supplements to the Law on Forests. A decision was made to determine the seat of the RS NA.
