The High Representative of the International Community for BiH, Carlos Westendorp, decided to adopt the law on Citizenship, starting 1st January, even though it has not been adopted by the Parliament of BiH. He announced his decision today in his letter to the members of BiH Presidency, which was published in its entirety by the Sarajevo press. Westendorp stated that his decision would apply until the law is adopted by both Houses of the Parliament in its proposed form without comments and conditions.

The decision on bringing the law into force was brought in the spirit of the Bonn Conference on BiH, which authorised him to decide in cases where the parties in BiH could not reach an agreement. The law on Citizenship that both Houses of the BiH Parliament were expected to adopt by the 15th December 1997 was not significantly reviewed, because of the demand of the Serb side to solve the issue of dual citizenship in that context. It is obvious that Westendorp partially supported that demand in his letter to the members of the BiH Presidency, since he asked the Parliament to sign a statement on the possibility of making a bilateral agreement on dual citizenship. He has also asked the members of the BiH Presidency to consider the subjects on dual citizenship. The House of Representatives and the House of the Peoples of the BiH Parliament were obliged, according to the demands of the International Community, to adopt three crucial laws by the 15th December; the law on citizenship, law on passports and law on Council of Ministers.
