"The Serb Orthodox Church condemns any kind of terrorist action regardless of who does it and against whom," archpriest Slavko Maksimovic from Brcko stated. The blowing up of the church in Brcko upset the citizens of this town, especially the inscription HEZBOLAH written on one of the walls of the church. What did the terrorist want to say? "It is significant that another church, the church of Saint Petka in Brcko, was burned as well. We are afraid that evil forces are trying to stop progress and the peace process in the area. We are doing our best to calm down the people in Brcko. This act is not directed against the Serbs but also against the peace process in general, i.e. against the implementation of the DA and the election results,' Miodrag Pajic, president of the Municipality of Brcko, stated.

"The people are very upset because they are not free and safe any more. So many victims fell for freedom, and I want to believe that the IC has nothing to do with this. But I remember when Supervisor Farrand visited the church. I remember exactly what he said on that occasion. He said: "You will remember me, and the day I came. Why do not you stop the construction?", said archpriest Slavko Maksimovic.

The Security Council of Brcko reported that the explosion had worsened the security situation in Brcko. The RS Government, headed by Gojko Klickevic, condemned the terrorist act of blowing up the church in Brcko and the burning of the church of Saint Petka in Gracica, and conveyed the protest to Supervisor Farrand. Cathy Leden, spokesperson of IPTF, stated that IPTF, SFOR and the local Police had not finished the investigation yet and emphasised that the explosion had been much stronger than they had at first thought, and that it had not been a hand grenade but an explosive device which had made a hole 1 metre in diameter. The investigation is to be continued.
