NATO General Walter Jertz informed the press that two incidents occurred in the last 24 hours during bombing actions. One incident occurred in Pirot in an attack on an ammunition depot when one bomb went astray because the target was covered with smoke. The second incident occurred near Nis when NATO pilots launched two bombs at the river because the military target was hidden in the forest. He did not say if there were casualties in these two incidents and reiterated that the air campaign would intensify. According to him there were 697 flights yesterday. During the past 24 hours NATO has hit artillery, ground troops, tanks, arms depots, radar and missile posts, command centres and a wide range of, as he said, strategic targets. General Jertz said that Serbian forces were using temporary bridges in Kosovo and amassing new weapons instead of destroyed ones. He also said that the KLA was trying to maintain the supply corridor in the west of Kosovo towards the Albanian border. Jamie Shea said that the job of NATO pilots was dangerous but they were trained and professional. He said that pilots fly in 12-hour shifts and that they are very motivated. Pilots prepare for 4 hours before the flight, then fly for 6 hours and then spend 2 hours briefing on the action. Commenting on speculation that if NATO does not win until June 8 it would mean the failure of the air campaign, Shea said that air campaign was successful and there was no change of strategy. Responding to a question on reports about environmental pollution because of the bombing, he said that that NATO was selective regarding choosing targets and that there were no long-term consequences for the environment.

Australian Foreign Affairs Minister said that the conviction of the CARE workers was unacceptable and would be appealed against.
